

Fall 2021 Delivery Methods

The majority of classes at Capilano University will be taught in person with some classes being taught online (either synchronous or asynchronous) or in a mixed-mode format (a combination of online and in person).

- In-Person: Sections require that students join the class on specified days/times and location.
- Online- Asynchronous: Sections do not require students to join the class online on any specific day/time.
- Online- Synchronous: Sections require that students join the class online on specified days/times. Sections that are delivered synchronously are scheduled in Pacific Time.
- Mixed Mode: (In-person + Online): Sections are delivered using BOTH in-person and online methods in combination. These sections require that students join the class in-person on specified days/times, but not exclusively.

Additional information about the sections such as specific meeting times for mixed mode sections or whether a section is online synchronous or asynchronous will be listed in the course registration notes in MyCap Schedule.

Course Description: This university writing course introduces students to foundational strategies for critical reading, analytical thinking, and clear writing. Through the exploration of topical questions in local and global contemporary culture, the course teaches core skills for active reading and discussion, and provides students with opportunities to write in a range of forms and genres from blog posts to critical analysis to research projects. Revision and detailed individual feedback are fundamental components of the course. Modules on research literacy are taught in collaboration with the university library. Modules on editing, revision, and digital literacy are taught in collaboration with the Capilano Writing Centre.
