

Indigenous Digital Filmmaking Diploma

Develop your creative voice

There is a growing demand for Indigenous people to see their history and experiences accurately reflected in quality productions on screens large and small. In the Indigenous Digital Filmmaking program at Capilano University, you'll cultivate a distinctive voice as a filmmaker.

Gain the skills to work in film and television

You'll grow your skills in camera operation, lighting and sound, screenwriting, documentary filmmaking, production and post-production, digital editing, technical directing, production design, narrative production and Indigenous cinema. Additionally, you'll develop entrepreneurial abilities in business development grant writing and research to identify opportunities and financiers specific to Indigenous production.

Learn from indigenous professionals

Working alongside veteran Indigenous filmmakers, you'll gain an understanding of key elements of the production process, including promoting cultures and languages, storytelling for fact-based productions and scriptwriting for dramatic productions.

Program

Indigenous Digital Filmmaking Diploma

2 years | Full-time | Starts in Sept | North Vancouver Campus

Career paths

- Camera operator
- Documentary filmmaker
- Editor
- Production manager
- Screenwriter